Event Introduction

- * Contemporary trends & issues in Chinese Pharma in 2009 and early 2010
- * Healthcare reform and drug policy impacts on the Chinese pharma sector
- * Changing dynamics in Chinese pharmaceutical regulation
- * Latest trends in China's pharmaceutical IP and legal environments
- * Interactive discussion and brainstorming with our panel of top experts

Despite uncertainties in the global pharmaceutical arena, output value of the Chinese pharmaceutical industry surged another 17.8% in the first half of 2009. Both the output value and sales value for all sub-sectors of the industry rose at double digit rates.

On top of the high output value and sales growth, the industry's total profits and total net profits jumped 15% and 22% respectively in the first seven months. Profits of large companies enjoyed the highest growth in the period.

The ongoing healthcare reform, under which rural and community healthcare will be heavily invested, is beginning to change the landscape of the Chinese pharmaceutical sector with many new policies, in particular the country's essential drug, reimbursement and pricing policies, falling into places. Although implementation of China's healthcare reform has just begun, its impacts are already felt strongly in some areas.

Meanwhile, China's drug regulation regime has continued to evolve in search of better solutions to secure drug safety and efficacy while fostering innovation and supporting industry development.

Following China's WTO entry in 2002, the country has been moving its intellectual property rights (IPR) regime closer to those found in many more developed nations. Despite the substantial progress made in this area, a number of issues continued to remain. Besides, strengthened regulations and enforcements in this area have led to an increase in the number of IPR infringement cases being brought before the courts or taken up through China's administrative procedures.

As China's legal system evolves and becomes sophisticated, the Chinese population has become increasingly aware of their patient rights in the healthcare process which also resulted in a growing number of lawsuits related to the quality of medical services and drug products. Consequently, pharmaceutical companies are facing a more challenging legal environment in the country than just a few years ago.

This Pharma China Forum event in English is hosted by Pharma China and sponsored RDPAC and TBD. The event seeks to improve understanding of new healthcare policies and drug regulations, draw attention to the remaining pharmaceutical IP issues and alert on the changing legal environment for drug companies.

Four leading experts will share their knowledge, insights and expertise in contemporary market trends, healthcare reform and policy direction, drug regulation and IP/legal issues. The presentation will be followed by an interactive panel discussion with speakers and other experts.

What sets this event apart from those organized by professional conference companies?

- It is an event organized by executives for executives
- Exclusive industry and market information contents are presented and distributed at the event
- Only the industry experts with real world experience to share are invited to present at the event
- Cost effectiveness – our goal for this event is not profit but to bring value-added services to our subscribers and potential customers.
